So far as can be ascertained there is no safe foundation for the rumors regarding changes in the cabinet, Nobody appears to be able to assign a good reason why the President should desire to make changes during the present month and at a time when the various secretaires are engaged in considering and preparing their annual reports. It is a matter of very little importance whether Assistant Secretary of the Treasury New retires or not, for as long as Secretary Folger insists on managing things in his own way, Mr. New's work in the department is of small moment. It makes but little difference whether he be present or absent.

The three votes in each case votes to 306 for Raab the highest given for any candidate on the Democratic ticket, (outside of the legislative ticket) while the lowest was for Rhein, 208. From this it will be seen that he ran far behind his ticket in the Second ward. At the Island poll he did not do as well. There he got 489 divided by three-163 while Morrison got 306, the highest and seiter the lowest, 262. In the First ward he got 334 divided by three-1111 which was less that Underwood who next to him received the lowest vote and nearly 86 less than Lepage who received the highest number on the Democratic ticket. At the Fourth ward poll he received 596, divided by three-1983 which was less by over 100 votes than the vote recived by most of the other candidates on his ticket. At Heims' poll he received just about one half the votes that the other candidates on the ticket with him got. He would have been defeated had it not been for the efforts made by Mr. Starkel and his friends in his behalf, at Belleville. I he had got the Democratic vote in this ity given to the candidate receiving the nighest vote on that ticket it would have been 3,483 instead of 2,087. We don't see where his popularity comes in.

Wm. RAWLEY, Agt.

Ah, who would think that selfish aims
Would make a man a liar,
And for the fleeting glow of fame
Would risk eternal fire.
But day by day we learn the fact
That men are double dealing;
That some will seek to gain by craft
What others gain by stealing.

Some there are whose souls are cram'd With put-on Christian graces,
Who wear damnation in their hearts,
Salvation in their faces.
The true in heart are hard to find,
And truth is under cover; The more you seek for honest men.
The fewer you discover.

The ranks of social life are filled With vain dissimulation, Where every artifice is used To gain but admiration. But all their arrogance and pride, No odds how sweet or bitter, When sifted down to real worth Is little less than glitter.

We find that truth is but a robe
Put on and off at pleasure,
The man who wears the longest face
Can give the shortest measure.
Hypocrisy the world detests
And scorns the rich who moulds it,
And yet this would-be honest world
With open arms upholds it.

Give me the man whose hand is true,
Whose heart is faithful ever:
Who has a soul that's not upheld
By an all-selfish lever;
Who speaks and acts an honest part, And who for manhood's sake alone, Can suffer self-denial.

A MIDNIGHT MASH.

A night just fit to talk of love;
Now don't you think I'm right?

Upon those eyes so bright— For they must be, I surely know, As the stars that shine to-night.
